KUALA LUMPUR, Oct 6 — Tengku Razaleigh Hamzah defended today his role in the controversial “Undilah” video, stating he was only trying to encourage the public to register to vote.

Despite critics stating that the public service announcement was anti-Barisan Nasional (BN), the Umno veteran gave it a thumbs-up when asked by reporters today in Parliament.

“Bagus (good). But if those with the power to ban it want to ban it, then go ahead,” he said when asked his opinion of the clip before entering Parliament.

The Malaysian Insider reported that the Malaysian Communications and Multimedia Commission (MCMC) directed local broadcasters not to use the four-minute clip produced by musician Pete Teo just days after its launch on September 16.
